The people aboard the Pocahontas were thoroughly congenial, spending a most pleasant time socially, chatting on board the upper and lower decks, in the saloon, and after the exercises incident to the unveiling a number, lunched under the trees at the old fort. Violators Fined. [Special to The Times-Dispatch.] GREENSBORO, N. C., May 13.—Acting under a new law, which provides for the punishment of an organization formed to fight the new Guilford county road law, which requires citizens to work the roads during the year, or in lieu thereof pay 75 cents per day, forty-six citizens of the county have refused to work the roads and being duly warned, are to pay the 75 cents.

Warrants have been served on twenty-three, and in the presence of a crowded courtroom, Justice Wolfe this afternoon tried the cases. Bynum and Adams, appearing for the defendants, and regular attorneys of the organization, asked that the defendants be released on order to work the roads, contending that since the county commissioners had not required all citizens of the county to work the roads, it was unfair to require it of country people. The defendants were fined $2 and costs each, except one man, who refused to obey the law. A significant fact was disclosed—that the ring-leaders of the organized rebellion had paid the 75 cents required in lieu of work.

N. Wilson, county attorney, prosecuting the cases, asked that the minimum fine be imposed, contending that the county authorities were fully entitled to discourage and punish open defiance of law.

County Attorney Charles G. He has also written to Senator Overman and Congressman Godwin, requesting an investigation and asking, if necessary, the passage of a bill granting permission to build the bridge.
